

Day of One Timeline

2014

Day of One is translated into 20 languages and people from over 60 countries will make the Day of One promise to each other on Jan 1, 2014. Day of One turns 1

2013

After two weeks of Facebook sharing, people in 43 nations and eight languages make the Day of One promise, which circles the globe as midnight brings in the new year. Day of One is born.

2012

Nadi writes the words to Day of One and posts it to his Facebook. Within hours, Day of One is shared a dozen times. This leads to the idea to say it in a circle around the world.

2011

Nadi meets the inspiring Shannon Abbott on the Appalachian Trail and together they work on a re-launch of imagine1.org, which is the precursor to the dayofone.org launch in 2013

2010-
2008

Nadi creates imagine1.org in 2008 to explain what the photo exhibit taught him; that we belong to One Family. He reaches out to people around the world and asks them to go the use imagine1.org to tell others why we all belong to One Family. Nadi continues to discuss the One Family vision during his travels. He speaks to people of many nations to see if they agree. The discussion is lively but overall it is positive. There are many opinions, but most agree it is time to begin; it is time to build One Family.

2007

Scott "Nadi" Gray completes several around the world trips then exhibits travel photos in a local coffee shop. While preparing the exhibit, his decision to post photos of very diverse and unique, yet interconnected, people helps him to see the commonality of humanity.
